

“Engaging My Community”

If I were Mayor, I would make a community garden. This garden would have plants, fruits, and vegetables. The fruits and vegetables would be used to feed the community. This garden would be a way to bring people together. People could take food from the garden as they needed. This garden could also be used as an activity area for picnics, relaxing, and get togethers.

There are many things I would do to get this project started. The first thing I would do would be to put together a community meeting to discuss the plan. This would get people excited about the idea. We could think of ways to raise money for the project. At the meeting we would find out the things we need to get this started. We would write down notes to put together a plan.

Next we would have to find an area of land that we could use to get this project started. The committee would get permission to make the garden. I would have a fundraiser to raise money for supplies. I would contact some groups to take care of the garden. Some of the groups are scouts, youth groups, senior groups, and others. This garden would bring people together and make it a more beautiful place to live. This is what I would do if I was Mayor.
